Biography

James Peacock has strived for success in the litigation field long before he became an attorney. While in law school he was a member of several successful Mock Trial teams, one of which made it to the National competition. He also was a finalist in the ABA Labor and Employment Mock Trial competition. To further expand his understanding on the intricacies of courtroom trials he also sat on the jury for the Dallas Kids Project and acted as a judge in the Texas High School Mock Trial competition. As he started his career in law, James became a proficient researcher and drafter working on every aspect of files with a diligent hands-on approach. One of his larger cases was a $100 million federal case in which his team was successful in getting positive verdict.
